Introduction: What the Data are Intended to Mean

The Grapevine project, begun in 1960 by M. M. Chambers, entails an annual survey of state higher education and government officials. The intent is to record annual state tax appropriations for the operating expenses of higher education, noting percent changes from year to year. As such, the Grapevine data are indicators of state tax effort in support of higher education and should not be confused with total state spending for higher education. We ask states not to include allocations to higher education that derive from non-tax monies.

This report details state tax appropriations for the support of higher education in fiscal year 2006 (FY06). The data reported here were collected from April 2005 through December 2005 in the annual Grapevine survey conducted by Illinois State University's Center for the Study of Education Policy. States were asked to provide data for the new fiscal year (FY06) and revisions (if necessary) to data reported in previous surveys for FY05, FY04, FY01 and FY96. This allows us to determine changes in appropriations over a ten-year, five-year, two-year, and one-year time period.¹

Respondents were asked to adhere to five general guidelines when reporting their appropriations data:

- 1. Report only appropriations, not actual expenditures.
- 2. Report only sums appropriated for annual operating expenses.
- 3. For state tax appropriations in complex universities, set out separately the sums appropriated for (or allocated to) the main campuses, branch campuses and medical centers (even if on the main campus). The medical center item should include operation of colleges of medicine, dentistry, pharmacy and nursing, and teaching hospitals, either lumped as one sum or set out separately as preferred.

4. Include:

- Sums appropriated for state aid to local public community colleges and for the operation of state-supported community colleges, and for vocational-technical two-year colleges or institutes that are predominantly for high school graduates and adult students.
- Sums appropriated to statewide coordinating boards or governing boards, either for board expenses or for allocation by the board to other institutions or both.
- Sums appropriated for state scholarships or other student financial aid.
- Sums destined for higher education but appropriated to some other state agency. Sometimes these sums have to be estimated because the exact amount disbursed cannot be known until after the end of the fiscal period. Examples include

¹ Appropriations for higher education are often changed as states balance their budgets. Because of these revisions, the data in this report may not match appropriations figures reported by Grapevine in previous years.

- -- funds intended for faculty fringe benefits and that may be appropriated to the state treasurer and disbursed by that office; and
- -- certain funds for medical and health education that may be appropriated to the state department of health and disbursed from that department.
- Appropriations directed to private institutions of higher education at all levels.
- 5. Exclude appropriations for capital outlays and debt service as well as appropriations of sums derived from federal sources, student fees, auxiliary enterprises and other non-tax sources.

These ground rules are meant to achieve a level of uniform reporting. However, the diverse practices and budgeting cycles of the 50 states make it impossible to eliminate all inconsistencies and accomplish absolute comparability among states and institutions. Variations between states may also reflect the fact that some states operate under biennial budgeting systems while others do not. Comparative analyses should be conducted with these caveats in mind.

Summary Findings, Fiscal Year 2006

Survey results for fiscal year 2006 (FY06) reveal that state tax appropriations for higher education totaled to $66.6 billion, a 6.0% increase from the $62.9 billion appropriated in Fiscal Year 2004-05 (FY05). This is the second consecutive annual increase since the 2.1% decline from FY03 to FY04, reflecting a recovery from the last recession and the subsequent capacity of most states to sustain or modestly increase tax support for higher education. Indeed, the trend data outlined in Table 1 (below) suggest that, in aggregate, higher education appropriations rebounded more quickly after the last recession than they did after the recession of the early 1990s.

Of course, there were considerable variations across the states. Percent changes from FY05 to FY06 ranged from -6.0% in West Virginia to 20.1% in Hawaii. While 28 states increased higher education appropriations from FY05 to FY06 by 5% or more, 9 states experienced marginal increases of 2% or less, and 4 states experienced declines. (See Table 3 on pages 6-7.) Two-year percent changes from FY 04 to FY 06 were similarly varied, ranging from -9.6% in West Virginia to 23.4% in Hawaii; total state tax appropriations for higher education increased by 9.7% over this two-year period. (See Table 4 on pages 8-9).

The remainder of this report summarizes FY06 findings in terms of (a) regional variations, (b) appropriations in the nine "megastates," (c) appropriations for community colleges, (d) 10-year and 5-year percent changes in appropriations across the states, and (e) trends in appropriations per capita and per $1,000 in personal income. The report concludes with detailed FY06 tables for each state. These tables often provide important footnotes that explain nuances in state data. Again, it is important to note that the diverse practices of the 50 states make it impossible to eliminate all inconsistencies and accomplish absolute comparability among states and institutions.

Regional Variations in Changes from FY 05 to FY 06

Examined from a regional perspective, states in the Midwest tended to experience lower percent changes from FY05 to FY06 than did states in other areas of the country. (See Figure 1, below, and Table 5 on pages 10-11).

This was particularly true of states in the Great Lakes region, which collectively experienced only a 0.5% increase in state tax appropriations for higher education from FY05 to FY06. At the other extreme were states in the Far West, which collectively experienced a 9.1% increase. States in the Southeast and Mideast regions were not far behind, with aggregate increases of 6.6% and 6.1% respectively. Of course, these aggregate numbers do not reflect the fortunes of all of the states within these regional groups. For example, although states in the Southeast region experienced a substantial gain of 6.6%, two states within that region (Mississippi and West Virginia) experienced a decline in appropriations for higher education from FY 05 to FY 06, and another state (Tennessee) experienced a 0% change.

Megastates

These regional variations can also be seen in Table 6 (page 12), which provides appropriations data for the 9 "megastates" that account for more than 50% of all state tax appropriations for higher education nationwide. In all, state tax appropriations supporting higher education rose by 6.2% from FY05 to FY06 in these states, accounting for 53% of the increase in state tax appropriations nationwide. Yet the experiences of these megastates were divided. Illinois appropriations declined by 2.6%, while neighboring states in the middle of the country experienced only modest increases (Ohio, 0.5%; Pennsylvania, 1.6%; and Michigan, 3.3%). On the other end were North Carolina, Texas, California, and New York, experiencing relatively high increases of (respectively) 9.7%, 9.2%, 9.1%, and 7.7%. Florida fell in the middle, experiencing a 4.9% increase. The influence of California on national averages is evident in the fact that 21% of the total national increase in state tax appropriations for higher education between FY 05 and FY 06 was accounted for by increases in California.

Community Colleges

Previous Grapevine reports covering fiscal years 1996, 1997, and 1998 analyzed state tax appropriations for community colleges, making a distinction between "state-aided community colleges," at which local tax appropriations constitute a significant portion of institutional revenue, and "state community colleges," which receive little or no local tax monies. We resume this analysis in this report, drawing on data from the 46 states that separate out community college data in their Grapevine reports. As the data in Tables 7 and 8 (pages 13-15) reveal, state-aided community colleges experienced a 7.5% increase in state tax appropriations from FY05 to FY06 and a 19.0% increase from FY04 to FY06. Changes in state tax appropriations for state community colleges were slightly lower, 7.4% from FY05 to FY06 and 15.4% from FY04 to FY06.

Five-Year and Ten-Year Percent Changes

Despite the overall increase in state tax appropriations for higher education from FY05 to FY06, many states have still not caught up with losses experienced earlier in the decade. (See Tables 9 and 10, pages 16-19). The percent change in state tax appropriations for higher education from FY 01 to FY 06 ranged across the states from a decline of 20.3% in Colorado, to an increase of 76.8% in Nevada. In all, FY 06 appropriations were smaller than FY 01 appropriations in 13 states, as indicated below.

² Minnesota and Vermont fold community college appropriations into the total appropriations reported for state college and university systems. South Dakota has no community colleges per se. Community college data reported by Hawaii are not net of student fees; thus they are not included.

Longer-term, 10-year percent changes (from FY96 to FY06), also detailed in Tables 9 and 10, ranged across the states from -2.5% in West Virginia to 149.7% in Nevada; the median was 43.9%. Care must be taken in interpreting these data, because variations in population change create differing demand curves across the states for higher education over time.³

Appropriations per Capita and per $1,000 in Personal Income

Tables 11 and 12 (pages 20-23) show, respectively, state-by-state variations in higher education state tax appropriations indexed against population size as determined by the Bureau of the Census ("appropriations per capita") and against the total personal income generated in each state as determined by the United States Bureau of Economic Analysis ("appropriations per $1,000 in personal income"). Appropriations per capita in FY06 ranged from $89.45 in Hew Hampshire to $433.96 in Wyoming; the median across the states was $229.26. FY06 appropriations per $1,000 in personal income ranged from $2.38 in New Hampshire to $13.45 in New Mexico; the median was $6.68.

Comparisons over time (also provided in Tables 11 and 12) reveal that 15 states experienced a decline in higher education tax appropriations per capita from FY01 to FY06. But a majority of the states (39) experienced a decline in tax appropriations per $1,000 in personal income. This latter measure, which requires no correction for inflation, suggests that most states are devoting a smaller proportion of their total wealth to tax support for higher education than they did five years ago.

³ For an analysis of the varying demand curves faced by the states, see Postsecondary Participation and State Policy: Meeting the Future Demand, by Mario C. Martinez (Sterling, VA: Stylus, 2004).

*Grapevine reports make a distinction between "state-aided community colleges," at which local tax appropriations constitute a significant portion of institutional revenue, and "state community colleges," which receive little or no local tax appropriations. For the purposes of this report, "state-aided" community colleges are those located in states in which local tax appropriations account for at least 10% of total government funding for all community colleges in the state (including appropriations, grants, and contracts from federal, state, and local governments). Revenue data from the Integrated Postsecondary Education Data System (IPEDS) for fiscal year 2005 were used to make this determination. Data for university branch campuses, which are sometimes considered part of the community college enterprise, were not used in calculating the percentage of government revenues that are accounted for by local tax appropriations, and the data reported here do not include appropriations for university branches.

The report submitted by Colorado to Grapevine makes a distinction between "state community colleges," which receive no local tax allocations, and "local community colleges," which do receive local tax allocations. Colorado is the only that makes this distinction in its Grapevine report. The data here represent appropriations for the "local community colleges" that receive local tax appropriations.

State Tables, Fiscal Year 2006

The following pages provide appropriations reports for each of the 50 states. The level of detail varies from state to state. Some list appropriations data for individual institutions, while others offer only aggregate figures for state higher education systems. Some provide separate lines for monies that are destined for higher education but that are initially appropriated to other agencies (as in the case of fringe benefit monies that are originally appropriated to the state treasurer). But most fold those figures into lines for institutions or state systems. Appropriations for student financial aid are reported separately by most states, but in some cases they are folded into lines for state higher education agencies.

Notes for FY 2005:

1. The general revenue for FY 05 was revised to reflect a supplemental funding increase for Special Projects of $5.6 million and Promise Scholarships of $10.9 million. However, this has been revised to show when the funding will be used, which is FY06.

Notes for FY 2006:

- 2. EPSCOR is funded in the account for the Secretary of Education and the Arts.
- 3. Promise Scholarships have always been funded from excess lottery except for the supplemental mentioned in note 1 above and the total is included in these figures. However, the lottery portion has been subtracted at the bottom of the form to determine the amount of general revenue appropriations.
- 4. These are new categories of funding that began in FY 2002 and are distributed to the institutions on the basis of approved proposals. This funding is not considered base funding.
- 5. The Research Challenge funding is in a non-appropriated account for spending authorization.
- 6. Subtraction of lottery funds This is special revenue from statewide lottery profits that are used for education and other purposes, but is subtracted to determine the amount of general tax appropriations. It is included in line items above as it is funding an increasing proportion of higher education.
- 7. Funding in the amount of $10 million is received from excess lottery for capital purposes, but is not reflected in these figures.

Notes concerning community college data:

- 1. In 2003-2004 the legislature appropriated $737k to support faculty salaries for new nursing programs. This was previously accounted for in the commission administration. However, after talking with J. Palmer, it was deemed more appropriate to include these funds with the community college block grant awards. This revision was made.
- 2. In the past, the $112k LEAP funds were included in the block grant for the colleges. LEAP funds are now included in a separate "Aid to students" category.
- 3. In 2003-2004, the legislature appropriated $500k to the WHEAA board for student loans for nursing students. These funds, which had not been previously reported, are now included in the "Aid to Students" category.
